OATH OF OFFICE CEREMONY FOR COUNTY ASSESSOR JEFFREY PRANG

Newly-elected Assessor Jeffrey Prang became the 27th Los Angeles County Assessor yesterday with a swearing-in ceremony at the Hall of Administration before a gathering of some 600 friends, family, County employees and elected city and County officials.

Los Angeles City Controller Ron Galperin served as the Master of Ceremonies and State Controller/Treasurer-elect Honorable John Chiang administered the oath of office to the former West Hollywood Councilmember as his partner Ray Vizcara watched Mr. Prang become the Los Angeles County Assessor.

Joining Prang at the ceremony were Mayor Mike Antonovich, Supervisors Don Knabe and Zev Yaroslavsky, former Sheriff Lee Baca, former Assessor Rick Auerbach, and former acting-Assessor and Deputy Chief Executive Officer Santos Kreimann.

"I was proud to participate in the swearing-in of our new County Assessor. Jeffrey Prang has a great deal of experience and talent, and I'm certain he'll bring honesty and integrity to the Assessor's Office," stated City Controller Galperin.

During his remarks, Prang, as his first official act, recognized the work of acting-Assessor Sharon Moller with a Proclamation of Thanks. He also thanked the hard working staff at the Assessor's Office and pledged a future of progress and partnership.

"It was 22 years ago that I eagerly started my County career, right here at the Hall of Administration when hired by then Assessor Kenneth P. Hahn," Prang said, "My life has come full circle and today I bring that same enthusiasm to serving the taxpayers of Los Angeles County, who I want to thank for putting their trust in me. Over the next four years, I pledge to modernize our Assessor's Office. I will begin by appointing a transition team comprised of some of the best and brightest Los Angeles County has to offer so we together can take a fresh look at how we serve the public."
